Warket Shows Irregularity, but Steadies on New Weather Prediction.

A Total Eclipse.

For months past every sold out bull in the industrial list has been dilating upon the obvious advantages of the railroad stocks. It was inevitable that sooner or later they must reflect the increasing prosperity of the country, they were comparatively cheap and the floating supply was so small that they would move very fast when once started. Yesterday all of these predictions were justified to the last degree and every one who had ultered them was secretly surprised. It was a total eclipse of Warket Shows Irregularity, but Stradies on New Weather Prediction.

Corn Weak Despite Frosts.

There was no concerted effort to hold wheat values yesterday. Wall Street interests were not conspicuous on the buying side, nor were other groups. The leading interests in the trade repeatedly sold the market. Declines for the session reached 3½c. a bushel. Virtually

For eastern New York and New England, partly cloudy and cooler to-day; to-morrow, fair; continued cool; moderate northwest winds.

For New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania, fair, cooler to-day; to-morrow, fair; continued cool; moderate northwest winds.

For western New York, cloudy to-day; coller in east portion; to-morrow, fair; continued cold; moderate to fresh westerly winds, becoming variable to-morrow.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The centre of the storm from the upper lakes moved northward yesterday, leaving only its southern, extremity effective over the lake regions, where it caused snow over Laka Superior and rain eastward to western New York. Cloudy and showery conditions continued along the Atlantic coast, but throughout central and western sections the weather was generally fair and the pressure high from a centre over South Dakota and Nebraska.

The centre of the disturbance in the Guif of Mexico appeared on the west coast of Florida without notable energy.

It was generally cooler over all interior sections.

Frost occurred as far south as Tennewee.
